Germans Retire Seventy Miles.

TURN AND DELIVER
COUNTER ATTACKS

Losses in Battle of Marne Are Withheld and Declared to Be Staggering.

London, Sept. 17.—The right wing of the German army, which has moved back in less than a fortnight from the "gates of Paris," until it is drawn up on almost a straight line extending from the neighborhood of Noyon, in the west, to Bois Forges on the Meuse, north of Verdun, with its left resting on the German fortress of Metz, has gone back more than seventy miles in two weeks. The rest of the army also has had to retire before the whole could find ground on which to make another stand against the advance of the allies.

That the Germans intend to give battle on this line, with the River Aisne in front of their right, the hills of Rheims facing their center and the mountains and forest of Argonne on their left, there seems little doubt. They went back steadily before the French and English armies, fighting only rear guard actions until their right, in command of General von Kluck, got across the Aisne. Then they turned and delivered several counter attacks, which, however, according to the British official report, were repulsed, the Germans leaving 200 prisoners in the hands of the British.

Prepare to Resist Attacks.

These counter attacks doubtless were delivered in the hope of giving the troops of the right wing, exhausted by the long advance followed by a retreat almost as long, the opportunity of resting and preparing positions from which they could resist attacks from the allies and in which they could await reinforcements before taking up the offensive again.

The Germans are in the hilly country around Noyon, on the plateau north of Vic-sur-Aisne Soissons, and north of Rheims, where they are digging strong entrenchments and receiving reinforcements. But even here this right wing, which up to the present has borne the brunt of the fighting in the advance and the retreat, is not altogether safe, for the French army operating from Amiens clings to its flank, while the British and French forces continue to press in front.

It is essential, however, that they should hold their positions, for they cover the lines of retreat to the north which would be the only way out if defeat should be their lot. That they realize this is shown by the fact they have been contesting every foot of the ground with the allied armies the past two days and that both sides have suffered heavily.

Severe Fighting Occurs.

The British army, as has been its lot since it landed in France, is taking its full share in this fighting, which on the front has been particularly severe since the Germans crossed the Aisne and made their first determined stand in the retreat from Paris. The German center, which in the last few days has come more into line with the two wings, now stretches from the heights north of Rheims to the western foothills of the Argonne ridge, dipping a little south to touch Ville-sur-Turbe, just northeast of Camp de Chalons. This is all rough ground, in many places covered by heavy forest, which may by this time have been destroyed.

The German left has been driven back a little further than the center and holds the ground from west of the Argonne hills north of Varennes, which the French have reoccupied, to the Meuse, which it crosses at Consenvoye, and thence southeastward to Metz.

The crossing of the Meuse which the Germans have selected at Consenvoye is just out of range of the fortress guns of Verdun, so that as far as the battle now pending is concerned they have not to reckon with this stronghold, except as it offers support to the French, in case the allies are compelled to retire.

Special to Dispatch:

Antwerp, Sept. 17, 11:55 A. M.—The Germans are withdrawing their main forces and sending them into France in enormous numbers. Liege has been abandoned. But there are no signs that the Germans contemplate a general evacuation of Belgium, as troops withdrawn were immediately replaced by soldiers of the second line and naval reserve.

THIRD DAY OF
BATTLE OF AISNE

Special to The Dispatch:—

London, Sept. 17, 2:55 P. M.—The third day of the battle of Aisne finds the hosts of the Germans and Allies facing each other along the line of some two hundred miles stretching from Noyon fifty-five miles northeast of Paris, southeast to the Swiss frontier. Here between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 men are engaged in a struggle that in ferocity and strategic importance bids fair to rival the Battle of Marne.

AUSTRIANS IN REAR GUARD ACTION

Special to The Dispatch:—

London, Sept. 17, 2:55 P. M.—Fighting against the rear guard of the Austrians continues all along the line in Galicia, according to official reports from Petrograd. On the left bank of the river San, Russians are reported to have successfully attacked the retreating Austrians.

DEFEATED RUSSIAN
ARMY MOVES SOUTH

Berlin Also Receives Report of French Atrocities.

Berlin, Sept. 17.—According to documents found on Russian prisoners the remainder of the Russian army of Vilna, whose defeat was announced in Berlin, has moved southward to the Vistula river.

According to an official report French troops in fighting which took place on Aug. 25 attacked and destroyed a German field hospital, killing the physicians in charge and the nurses and wounded soldiers. Attention is called here to the rapidity with which the Siberian troops of Russia have appeared in the European field. Portions of the Third Siberian army corps, which was defeated at Lyck, in East Prussia, came from Irkutsk; consequently their mobilization and transportation must have been extraordinarily rapid, as Irkutsk is in Eastern Siberia.

Military experts here are scarcely able to believe that such a troop movement has been possible in the six weeks since the publication of the Russian order of mobilization.

GRAIN AND PROVISION PRICES

SAYS GERMANS FIRE ON THEIR OWN SOLDIERS.

Troyes, France, Sept. 17.—A Saxon officer, a prisoner of the French, declares that near Malines the German artillery annihilated a Prussian regiment which it had mistaken for French.

He says also that in a frontier village two battalions of German infantry fired upon each other until there was scarcely a man of either left.

GERMAN EFFORTS USELESS

Russia Reports Complete Rout of Austrian Army.

London, Sept. 17.—The official press bureau issued the following announcement: "It is stated from Russian official sources that the rout of the Austrian army in Galicia is complete. The Austrian loss since the taking of Lemberg is estimated at 250,000 killed and wounded, 100,000 prisoners and 400 guns. The Germans made desperate efforts to save the Austrian army, but failed completely."

REFUSES TO TAKE PART

America Unable to Pass on War.

GIVES WORLD NOTICE

Answer to Belgian Commission and Emperor William.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Formal notice was given to the world by President Wilson that the United States at this time cannot pass judgment on or take any part in controversies between the warring European nations over alleged violations of the rules of civilized warfare. He said settlements of these questions would have to wait until the end of the war, which he prayed might be soon.

The president announced the position of the American government in an address to the commission sent to him by the king of Belgium to protest against alleged atrocities committed by the German army. Later he sent a cable message along similar lines to the emperor of Germany, replying to the latter's recent protest that the allies were using dumdum bullets.

The Belgian commission was received at the White House with formal ceremony. The president, accompanied by his military aide and several high officials of the government, greeted the visitors in the east room and listened with grave attention to their address, setting forth in detail charges that German soldiers invading their land had killed and tortured men, women and children, destroyed art treasures and sacked cities.

Mr. Wilson read his prepared reply. "It would be unwise, it would be premature," he said, "for a single government, it would even be inconsistent with the neutral position of any nation which like this has not a part in the contest, to form or express a final judgment."

WILSON RESERVES DECISION

Replies to Kaiser's Message on Use of Dumdum Bullets.

Washington, Sept. 17.—President Wilson replied to the message recently received from Emperor William protesting against the alleged use by the allied armies of dumdum bullets. He said he had read the communication with the gravest concern, but that it would be unwise and premature for the United States to express final judgment in the controversy.

The message was almost identical with the speech made by the president to the Belgian commission which protested against alleged German atrocities.

A cablegram replying to the protest of President Poincare of France, who charged that the Germans were using dumdum bullets, also was prepared. It was not made public, but was known to follow closely the text of the president's message to Emperor William.

FOR USE AS TRANSPORTS

Great Britain Commandeers Canadian Pacific Liners.

Seattle, Sept. 17.—The British admiralty has commandeered not only all the Canadian Pacific liners on the Pacific ocean, but also has taken the Union Steamship company's new Australian liner Willechra and the new liner Tahiti, from the San Francisco-Australia run.

The Japanese government has taken over some passenger boats for transports, but is careful not to cripple the service to United States ports, the business of which is heavy.

FOOD IS GROWING SCARCE

Situation Said to Be Getting Critical in Germany.

Rome, via Paris, Sept. 17.—Reports received here from Germany discuss the situation as becoming somewhat critical owing to the great number of unemployed, the high cost of living and the scarcity of the necessities of life, especially wheat.

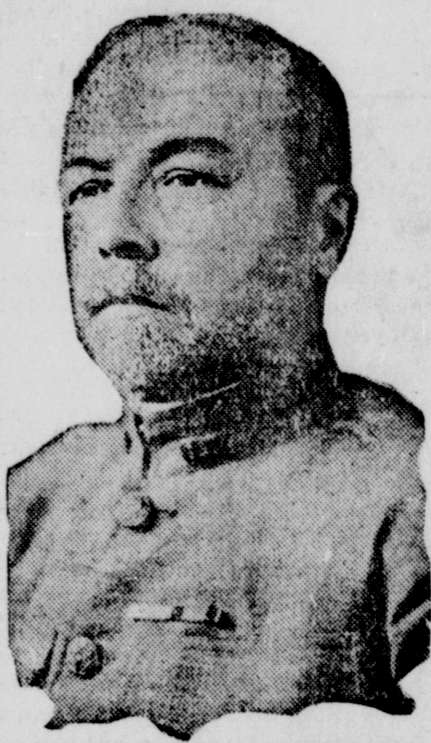

Wheat supplies for Germany by way of Holland has ceased since the blockade of the North sea. Great Britain is permitting no grain to enter Holland consigned to private persons or firms. Delivery is permitted only to the Dutch government.

Parliament to Be Prorogued.

London, Sept. 17.—Parliament probably will be prorogued Friday. The new session, it is understood, will begin the first week in November, unless some national emergency should demand the earlier attendance of the members.

GENERAL FUNSTON.

Recommends a Deliberate Evacuation of Vera Cruz.

FUNSTON SUGGESTS
EVACUATION DELAY

Recommends Remaining at Vera Cruz Until Oct. 10.

Vera Cruz, Sept. 17.—The American forces will not be withdrawn from Vera Cruz before Oct. 10, if the war department at Washington accepts the suggestion of Brigadier General Frederick Funston, who recommended that the steps incident to the evacuation of the city be taken with deliberation.

Perhaps the chief consideration of General Funston in recommending this date, it is believed, was a desire to give the thousands of Mexican refugees here an opportunity to leave the country. About 500 priests, 200 nuns, a dozen generals of the old army and scores of officers of lower rank are among those who sought safety within the American lines.

By far the greater part of the fugitive colony, however, are men and women of all stations in life whose names in most cases had been employed by Huerta's government in various capacities.

GERMAN RIGHT WING REPORTED CIRCLED.

London, Sept. 17.—The German right wing is now encircled by the allies, according to an Amiens dispatch to the Daily News.

IRISHMEN URGED TO FIGHT FOR EMPIRE

John Redmond Says They Should Furnish Their Quota.

London, Sept. 17.—"The democracy of Great Britain has kept faith with Ireland and it is now the duty of honor for Ireland to keep faith with them," says John Redmond, the Irish leader, in a manifesto, in which he calls on Irishmen to bear their share in the war in which the empire is engaged.

"The Irish people," Mr. Redmond continues, "know and appreciate the fact fully that at last, after centuries of misunderstanding, the democracy of Great Britain has finally and irrevocably decided to trust them and give them back their national liberties."

Mr. Redmond then goes on to speak of the war, saying:

"It is a just war, provoked by the intolerable military despotism of Germany. It is a war for high ideals of human government and international relations and Ireland would be false to her history, to every consideration of honor, good faith and self interest, did she not willingly bear her share in its burdens and its sacrifices."

"We have, even when no ties of sympathy bound our country to Great Britain, always given our quota, and more than our quota, to the fighting line; and we shall do so now."

Treasury Bills Easily Sold.

London, Sept. 17.—The third batch of treasury bills issued for war purposes were floated with the same ease as were the earlier issues. The $75,000,000 was divided equally between six months and twelve months bills. Tenders of $492.41 were received for the former and of $481.22 for the latter.

RESERVES ITS GROUNDS

United States Objects to Abrogation of Treaties.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople was instructed to protest to the Turkish government against its abrogation of the capitulations.

Secretary Bryan announced he had forwarded the instructions.

The following statement issued by Mr. Bryan is a paraphrase of the cablegram sent to Ambassador Morgenthau:

"You will bring to the attention of the Ottoman government that the government of the United States does not acquiesce in the endeavor of the imperial government to set aside the capitulations."

"Furthermore, this government does not recognize that the Ottoman government has a right to abrogate the capitulations, or that its action to this end being unilateral can have effect upon the rights and privileges enjoyed under the capitulatory conventions."

"You will state further that the United States reserves for the present the discussion of the grounds upon which its refusal to acquiesce in the action of the Ottoman government is based and also reserves the right to make further representations in this matter at a later date."

AUSTRALIAN FLEET ACTIVE

Warships Left Sydney Immediately After War Broke Out.

London, Sept. 17.—A dispatch to the Times from Sydney says Rear Admiral Sir George Pakenham, commander of the Australian fleet, reports that the German losses at Herberstshoehe, in the Bismarck archipelago, were twenty to thirty killed and seventeen German officers and noncommissioned officers made prisoners.

"Considering the dense bush, the trenches and the marked ranges," says the report, "our casualties were slight."

The Australian fleet left Sydney immediately following the outbreak of war and co-operated with the China squadron. It searched for the enemy's cruisers, put out of action the enemy's wireless stations in the Pacific, covered the New Zealand expeditionary force to Samoa and the Australian expedition to Herberstshoehe and patrolled the trade route. The cruiser Melbourne covered over 11,000 miles, mostly in the tropics.

SEVERAL COUNTER ATTACKS

British Press Bureau Reports Repulse of Germans.

London, Sept. 17.—The official press bureau gave out a statement which says:

"The general position along the Aisne river continues very favorable. The enemy has delivered several counter attacks, especially against the First army corps. These have been repulsed and the Germans have given way slightly before our troops and the French armies on our right and left."

"The enemy's loss is very heavy and we have taken 200 prisoners."

NAVAL BATTLE IN BALTIC

No Information as to Outcome of Engagement.

London, Sept. 17.—Although it is accepted in official circles that a naval battle has been fought in the Baltic, not a particle of information concerning the outcome is obtainable here.

Dispatches from Petrograd refer to the presence of the Germans in the Gulf of Finland and to their bombardment of "unprotected positions," but they are so badly mutilated by the censor that their information does not enlighten.

Naval experts here declare that they do not believe the main Russian fleet has been in action.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE GRODEK

Assert Austrians Continue Their Headlong Retreat.

Petrograd, Sept. 17.—It is announced that Russian forces have captured Grodek and advanced as far as Melska, within a day's march of the fortress of Przemyel, in the passage of the lower course of the San. There was no opposition, the enemy's force continuing its headlong retreat.

FUNSTON SUGGESTS EVACUATION DELAY

Recommends Remaining at Vera Cruz Until Oct. 10.

Vera Cruz, Sept. 17.—The American forces will not be withdrawn from Vera Cruz before Oct. 10, if the war department at Washington accepts the suggestion of Brigadier General Frederick Funston, who recommended that the steps incident to the evacuation of the city be taken with deliberation.

Perhaps the chief consideration of General Funston in recommending this date, it is believed, was a desire to give the thousands of Mexican refugees here an opportunity to leave the country. About 500 priests, 200 nuns, a dozen generals of the old army and scores of officers of lower rank are among those who sought safety within the American lines.

John Redmond Says They Should Furnish Their Quota.

London, Sept. 17.—"The democracy of Great Britain has kept faith with Ireland and it is now the duty of honor for Ireland to keep faith with them," says John Redmond, the Irish leader, in a manifesto, in which he calls on Irishmen to bear their share in the war in which the empire is engaged.

"The Irish people," Mr. Redmond continues, "know and appreciate the fact fully that at last, after centuries of misunderstanding, the democracy of Great Britain has finally and irrevocably decided to trust them and give them back their national liberties."

Mr. Redmond then goes on to speak of the war, saying:

Secretary Bryan announced he had forwarded the instructions.

The following statement issued by Mr. Bryan is a paraphrase of the cablegram sent to Ambassador Morgenthau:

"Furthermore, this government does not recognize that the Ottoman government has a right to abrogate the capitulations, or that its action to this end being unilateral can have effect upon the rights and privileges enjoyed under the capitulatory conventions."

"You will state further that the United States reserves for the present the discussion of the grounds upon which its refusal to acquiesce in the action of the Ottoman government is based and also reserves the right to make further representations in this matter at a later date."

Warships Left Sydney Immediately After War Breaks Out.
London, Sept. 17.—A dispatch to the Times from Sydney says Rear Admiral Sir George Faley, commander of the Australian fleet, reports that the German losses at Herberstshoehe, in the Bismarck archipelago, were twenty to thirty killed and seventeen German officers and noncommissioned officers made prisoners.

"Considering the dense bush, the trenches and the marked ranges," says the report, "our casualties were slight."

The Australian fleet left Sydney immediately following the outbreak of war and co-operated with the China squadron. It searched for the enemy's cruisers, put out of action the enemy's wireless stations in the Pacific, covered the New Zealand expeditionary force to Samoa and the Australian expedition to Herberstshoehe and patrolled the trade route. The cruiser Melbourne covered over 11,000 miles, mostly in the tropics.

British Press Bureau Reports Repulse of Germans.
London, Sept. 17.—The official press bureau gave out a statement which says:

"The general position along the Aisne river continues very favorable. The enemy has delivered several counter attacks, especially against the First army corps. These have been repulsed and the Germans have given way slightly before our troops and the French armies on our right and left."

"The enemy's loss is very heavy and we have taken 200 prisoners."

NAVAL BATTLE IN BALTIC

No Information as to Outcome of Engagement.
London, Sept. 17.—Although it is accepted in official circles that a naval battle has been fought in the Baltic, not a particle of information concerning the outcome is obtainable here.

Dispatches from Petrograd refer to the presence of the Germans in the Gulf of Finland and to their bombardment of "unprotected positions," but they are so badly mutilated by the censor that their information does not enlighten.

Naval experts here declare that they do not believe the main Russian fleet has been in action.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE GRODEK

Assert Austrians Continue Their Headlong Retreat.
Petrograd, Sept. 17.—It is announced that Russian forces have captured Grodek and advanced as far as Mieska, within a day's march of the fortress of Przemyśl in the passage of the lower course of the San. There was no opposition, the enemy's force continuing its headlong retreat.

THE WEATHER

Temperature record taken at Guillake dam by caretaker, Arthur L.
Mampel.
Sept. 16, maximum 79, minimum 60.

These September morns are beautiful. Get up early some morning and enjoy a Minnesota production of this kind.

The fall fashion number of the St.
Cloud Times is an indication of the prosperity enjoyed by the city and county in which it is printed.

Stillwater is entertaining the Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association at its 13th annual convention, which is attended by delegates from every city along the river as far south as St. Louis.

A Minneapolis man whose wife left him 24 years ago has commenced divorce proceedings. He claims he has been waiting for her to return to him all this time although he has had no knowledge of her whereabouts since she left. Watchful waiting that.

Chicago and eastern newspapers are beginning to talk of increased subscription rates. The increase in the price of paper makes every publisher who is getting out a weekly edition at $1.00 per year wonder where he is at, while many of them have ceased to wonder and informed their subscribers of an increase in price in order to cover cost of production.

The Pioneer Press is alarmed for fear some of Gov. Eberhart's friends will not be so because Wm. E. Lee claims to have been instrumental in the public utility matter and the formation of a commission to give the state a better and more economical form of government. What the Press is really trying to do is to stir up strife, the people don't care, a rap who is responsible just so that the goods are delivered.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, the millionaire who rides in a $10,000 automobile and enjoys other little luxuries denied the ordinary individual, has been learning some of the privations the man is up against whose bank account is in red ink and whose friends have ceased to respond to the request for a loan. Vanderbilt has been stranded in Geneva since the war broke out and he has known what it is to sleep in his clothes in his automobile and go without his meals on account of not having gold to pay for these luxuries, he spent his last 40 cents for a meal while waiting for an answer to a telegram which gave him access to a pile of gold in one of the bank vaults. But Vanderbilt had nothing on the Sultan of Zanzibar, stranded in Paris with fifteen wives and only $5 to struggle along with—and the fall styles of tailinery appearing in the windows.

The Chamber of Commerce, at its special meeting last evening, rescinded the action taken at a former regular meeting in regard to a $100 donation to the high school football team. The matter was referred to the finance committee, which will report at the next regular meeting, Wednesday evening, Sept. 23. At that time also the advisory board will make a report on the policy to be adopted in regard to appropriations and donations.

Passing through Brainerd today to the Morrison county fair at Motley were Farley Dare Ed Rogers,
Mack Kennedy, County Treasurer Mc-
Keown, Register of Deeds Nystvold, P. H. McGarry, P. M. Larson, of
Walker and Dana Wardner of Cass Lake. All attended the fair at Backus on Tuesday, visited the Crow Wing county fair Wednesday, the Morrison county fair at Motley today and intending going to the Pillager fair next week.

The Elks team went to the county fair this afternoon, intent upon an-nexing the $40 purse offered. They will meet the Pine River team which previously had a game with the Brainerd city team. F. S. Parker will officiate as water boy. The M.
& I. train provided a special chute for loading Elks at the Brainerd depot.
Jilly Vernon asked to umpire the game, but Ed Anderson and some of the other Elks would not let Bill officiate in that capacity. After having seen Vernon dance the tango,
they said he was too light on his feet
for the job of umpire.

Last evening about two hundred and fifty people found their way to the Swedish Lutheran church to surprise and bid farewell to Mr. John Benson. Mr. Benson has not only been a teacher of the Swedish school but also pastor of the Swedish congregation for the past four months.
Prayer meeting was held as usual which was followed by a speech of Mr. Goldstrand. He then presented him with a purse as a token of love for his faithful work done here in the community. This was a complete surprise to Mr. Benson, but in his quiet and ever thoughtful manner he expressed his heartfelt thanks to one and all. This was followed by extra music and light refreshments. The congregation joined in wishing Mr. Benson the greatest success and that the Lord bless his efforts in the future as he has done in the past at G. A. C., St. Peter, Minn.

Buy Direct from the Mills, and Give Our Customers the Price-Benefit of Our Close Buying Connections

We sell thousands of yards of Dress Goods every season. We never sell second-rate qualities and never carry goods over from season to season.

It is an iron-clad rule here to satisfy every customer—to show only the smartest styles—the most fashionable materials and complete assortments. So far as we know, we have never lost a customer who bought Dress Goods here and was disappointed with her purchase, consequently we feel certain that we can satisfy your most exacting requirements and guarantee to do so. Furthermore—we are certain that our plan of letting you select the materials and letting you order your Dresses made the way you want them made is—

The Plan that Affords You the Most Substantial Saving and Satisfaction

For us to mention a mass of alluring Dress Goods "bargains" could never convince you of our superior ability to serve you, as well as a personal and careful comparison of our offerings will.

For us to name a great number of choice fabrics would only confuse and distract you—yet it is generally conceded that our Dress Goods Assortments are as great as those found in many of the big Metropolitan Establishments.

For us to describe the Styles included in our Fall Opening Display would require space many times larger than this space; it would require the printing of more words than you would care to read—but—

If you want to be sure that the material for your new Dress is absolutely the "latest thing"—of the quality that insures genuine and lasting satisfaction—and if you want to know that the price is no higher than it ought to be—come to our Dress Goods Department and benefit by the advice and suggestions of the Dress Goods Experts waiting to serve you.

HIS FRIEND ALSO

The Conductor Sized up the Hobo and Agreed to Let Him Ride as the Brakeman Had Done

A funny story is told of a brakeman and conductor on a road. There was a hobo stealing a ride on the freight and the conductor halted the brakeman and said: "Put the hobo on."

The brakeman replied, "Can't do that, he's a friend of mine."

"Friend be blowed," retorted the conductor. "If you won't put him on, I'll see that he gets off the train."

The conductor traveled down the road and came back in a short time. He had sized up the hobo who was a perfect mouse in size and strength and had objected strenuously to leaving.

"Did you throw the guy off?" queried the brakeman.

"Nope," said the conductor laconically. "He was a friend of mine too."

Tocoma Figures of Speech

A Tacoma lawyer, arguing a divorce case recently, closed his address to the jury as follows: "My client is a beautiful woman, so beautiful that the sun seems to stand still while the stars gaze at her. Ruthful! Falsity flies from her even as the jack rabbit flits from the greyhound. Sweet! Gentlemen, honey could freeze in her mouth. Tender and slender! My client could bathe in a fountain pen." Had she used Kumalweiss' grain belt beers, instead of the cheap newly made kind, she would never have grown so thin. O. Nelson, Tel. 179-J.

BRAKEMAN MEETS SUDDEN DEATH

Little Falls, Minn., Sept. 17.—Falling from a car of poles in the Little Falls yards of the Northern Pacific railway, Harry Knowles, aged 23, son of Fred Knowles, one of the oldest conductors on the road, was instantly killed this morning.

There was no chance for the man to escape. He fell in such way over the rails that his head was outside the track and his feet within the rails. Two trucks passed over his chest.

BRAINERD TEACHERS LEAGUE

Holds its First Regular Meeting for the Present School Year at Whittier Building

The first regular meeting for the present school year of the Brainerd Teachers League was held at the Whittier building Tuesday evening.

The outlook for the year is very promising and there was no delay in getting several important things under way. The study book for the year was adopted and the books will be ordered at once so that preparation for discussion at the next regular meeting may have ample time.

A committee consisting of three vice presidents will outline other work. It is hoped that the year may mean a great advance for the Brainerd schools. New teachers have been gladly welcomed to membership.

Supt. W. C. Cobb was a welcome visitor and spoke of several important things connected with the new year's work.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five-and-ten-cent store, and often-times get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use:

5 grains Opton (1 tablet), 2 ounces Water.

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Opton system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and often-times cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

LOCAL DRUGGIST SAYS:

Another of Those Live O'Henry Stories in Two Reels

"The Stirrup Brother"

Do you like an O. Henry story? If you have read one, and most people in this country have read the majority of them, you most certainly do. O. Henry's pen pictures were resolute and supremely human. The Eclair company, some time ago, secured the exclusive right to film some of these stories, and "The Stirrup Brother" is one of them, and what O. Henry did with the pen the Eclair company have done with the motion pictures—in fact, the Eclair players have made the story even more real, more vivid. The characters are there before your eyes; they live and move, and the story, following the original closely, developed. The story has its locale in the West—and in the West the present play has been produced.

Nowhere else such fall hats. There's a remarkable list of "exceptions" in our exhibition of fall hats, and, judging by the success of our millinery salon, Brainerd women have observed the un-failing excellence, smartness, chic, of whatever is "different" here.

HIS FRIEND ALSO

The Conductor Sized up the Hobo and Agreed to Let Him Ride as the Brakeman Had Done

A funny story is told of a brakeman and conductor on a road. There was a hobo stealing a ride on the freight and the conductor hailed the brakeman and said: "Put the hobo on."

The brakeman replied, "Can't do it, he's a friend of mine."

"Friend be blowed," retorted the conductor. "If you won't put him on, I'll see that he gets off the train."

The conductor traveled down the cars and came back in a short time. He had sized up the hobo who was a perfect moose in size and strength and had objected strenuously to leaving.

"Did you throw the guy off?" queried the brakeman.

"Nope," said the con laconically. "He was a friend of mine too."

On and after the 18th meetings will be held on 1st and 3rd Fridays in Odd Fellows hall.

Tocoma Figures of Speech

A Tacoma lawyer, arguing a divorce case recently, closed his address to the jury as follows: "My client is a beautiful woman, so beautiful that the sun seems to stand still while the stars gaze at her, beautiful! Falsity flies from her even as the jack rabbit flits from the greyhound. Sweet! Gentlemen, honey could freeze in her mouth. Tender and slender! My client could bathe in a fountain pen." Had she used Kumalweiss' grain belt beers, instead of the cheap newly made kind, she would never have grown so thin.

BRAKEMAN MEETS SUDDEN DEATH

Little Falls, Minn., Sept. 17.—Falling from a car of poles in the Little Falls yards of the Northern Pacific railway, Harry Knowles, aged 23, son of Fred Knowles, one of the oldest conductors on the road, was instantly killed this morning.

There was no chance for the man to escape. He fell in such way over the rails that his head was outside the track and his feet within the rails. Two trucks passed over his chest.

Young Knowles was raised in Staples. The body is being prepared for burial and will be sent to Staples for interment.

BRAINERD TEACHERS LEAGUE

Holds its First Regular Meeting for the Present School Year at Whittier Building

The first regular meeting for the present school year of the Brainerd Teachers League was held at the Whittier building Tuesday evening.

The outlook for the year is very promising and there was no delay in getting several important things under way. The study book for the year was adopted and the books will be ordered at once so that preparation for discussion at the next regular meeting may have ample time. A committee consisting of three vice presidents will outline other work.

It is hoped that the year may mean a great advance for the Brainerd schools. New teachers have been gladly welcomed to membership.

Supt. W. C. Cobb was a welcome visitor and spoke of several important things connected with the new year's work.

Regular election of officers occurs in October. Miss Elizabeth Walsh was appointed to serve as secretary-treasurer until that time in place of Miss Howland, resigned, and Miss Kruger of the normal department takes the place of Mrs. Clark as third vice-president.

A. the close of the business session the usual social hour was enjoyed by all.

TO SAVE EYES

is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try it if Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five-and-ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use:

5 grains Optona (1 tablet).
2 ounces Water.
Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

Another of Those Live O'Henry Stories in Two Reels

"The Stirrup Brother"

Do you like an O. Henry story? If you have read one, and most people in this country have read the majority of them, you must certainly do. O. Henry's pen pictures were resolute and supremely human. The Eclair company, some time ago, secured the exclusive right to film some of these stories, and "The Stirrup Brother" is one of them, and what O. Henry did with the pen the Eclair company have done with the motion pictures—in fact, the Eclair players have made the story even more real, more vivid. The characters are there before your eyes; they live and move, and the story, following the original closely, developed. The story has its locale in the West—and in the West the present play has been produced.

CHAPTER V.

The Hunted Man.

That day was hot and windless with an unclouded sky—a day of brass and burning.

Long before any sound audible to human ears disturbed the noonday hush, a bobcat sunning on a log in a glade to which no trail led, pricked ears, rose, glanced over shoulder with a snarl and—of a sudden was no more there.

Perhaps two minutes later a succession of remote crashings began to be heard, a cumulative volume of sounds made by some heavy body forcing by main strength through the underbrush, and ceased only when a man broke into the clearing, pulled up, stood for an instant awaying, then reeled to a seat on the log, pillowing his head on arms folded across his knees and shuddering uncontrollably in all his limbs.

He was a young man who had been and would again be very personable. Just now he wore the look of one hounded by furies. His face was crimson with congested blood and streaked with sweat and grime; bluish veins throbbled in high relief upon his temples; his lips were cracked and swollen, his eyes haggard, his hands torn and bleeding. His shirt and trousers and "cruisers" were wrecks, the latter scorched, charred, and broken in a dozen places. Woods equipment he had none beyond a hunting knife belted at the small of his back. All else had been either consumed in the forest fire or stolen by his Indian guide—who had subsequently died while attempting to murder his employer.

Since that event, the man had succeeded in losing himself completely. In seeking shelter from the thunderstorm, he had lost touch with his only known and none too clearly located landmarks. Then, after a night passed without a fire in the lee of a ragged bluff, he had waked to discover the sun rising in the west and the rest of the universe sympathetically upside-down; and aimlessly ever since he had stumbled and blundered in the maze of those grimly reticent fastnesses, for the last few hours haunted by a fear of falling reason—possessed by a notion that he was dogged by furtive enemies—and within the last hour the puppet of blind, witless panic.

But even as he strove to calm himself and rest, the feeling that something was peering at him from behind a mask of undergrowth grew intolerably acute.

At length he jumped up, glared wildly at the spot where that something no longer was, flung himself frantically through the brush in pursuit of it, and—found nothing.

With a great effort he pulled himself together, clamped his teeth upon the promise not again to give way to hallucinations, and turned back to the clearing.

There, upon the log on which he had rested, he found—but refused to believe he saw—a playing card, a trey of hearts, face up in the sun-glare.

With a gesture of horror, Alan Law fled the place.

While the sounds of his flight were still loud, a grinning half-breed guide stole like a shadow to the log, laughed derisively after the fugitive, picked up and pocketed the card, and set out in tireless, cat-footed pursuit.

An hour later, topping a ridge of rising ground, Alan caught from the hollow on its farther side the music of clashing waters. Tortured by thirst, he began at once to descend in reckless haste.

What was at first a gentle slope covered with waist-deep brush and carpeted with leaf-mold, grew swiftly more declivities, a mossy hillside, as steep as a roof, bare of underbrush, and sparsely sown with small cedars through whose ranks cool blue water twinkled far below.

The shelving moss-beds afforded treacherous footing; Alan was glad now and then of the support of a cedar, but these grew ever smaller, and more widely spaced and were not always convenient to his hand. He came abruptly and at headlong pace within sight of the eaves of a cliff—and precisely then the hillside seemed to slip from under him.

His heels flourished in the air, his back thumped a bed of pebbles thinly overgrown with moss. The stones gave, the moss-skin broke, he began to slide—grasped at random a youngling cedar which stayed him imperceptibly, coming away with all its puny roots—caught at another, no more substantial—and amid a shower of loose stones shot out over the edge and down a drop of more than thirty feet.

He was instantaneously aware of the sun, a molten ball wheeling madly in the cup of the turquoise sky.

Then dark waters closed over him. He came up struggling and gasping, and struck out for something dark that rode the waters near at hand—something vaguely resembling a canoe.

But his strength was largely spent, his breath had been driven out of him by the force of the fall, and he had swallowed much water—while the field of his consciousness was stricken with confusion.

Within a stroke of an outstretched paddle, he flung up a hand and went down again.

Instantly one occupant of the canoe, a young and very beautiful woman in a man's hunting clothes, spoke a sharp word of command and, as her guide steadied the vessel with his paddle, rose in her place so surely that she scarcely disturbed the nice balance of the little craft, and curved her lithe body over the bow, head-foremost into the pool.

Mr. Law had, in point of fact, endured more than he knew; more than even a weathered woodsman could have borne without suffering. Forty-eight hours of such heavy woods-walking as he had put in to escape the forest fire, would have served to prostrate almost any man; add to this (ignoring a dozen other mental, nervous and physical strains) merely the fact that he had been half-drowned.

He experienced a little fever, a little delirium, then blank slumbers of exhaustion.

He awoke in dark of night, wholly unaware that thirty-six hours had passed since his fall. This last, however, and events that had gone before, he recalled with tolerable clearness—allowing for the sluggishness of a drowsy mind. Other memories, more vague, of gentle ministering hands, of a face by turns an angel's, a flower's, a fiend's, and a dear woman's, troubled him even less materially. He was already sane enough to allow he had probably been a bit out of his head, and since it seemed he had been saved and cared for, he found no reason to quarrel with present circumstances.

Still, he would have been grateful for some explanation of certain phenomena which still haunted him—such as a faint, elusive scent of roses with a vague but importunate sense of a woman's presence in that darkened room—things manifestly absurd.

With some difficulty, from a dry throat, he spoke, or rather whispered: "Water!"

In response he heard someone move over a creaking floor. A sulphur match spluttered famously. A candle caught fire, silhouetting—blusion, of course!—the figure of a woman in hunting shirt and skirt. Water splashed noisily. Alan became aware of someone who stood at his side, one hand offering a glass to his lips, the other gently raising his head that he might drink with ease.

Draining the glass, he breathed his thanks and sank back, retaining his grasp on the wrist of that unreal hand. It suffered him without resistance. The hallucination even went so far as to say, in a woman's soft accents:

"You are better, Alan?"

He sighed incredulously: "Rose!"

The voice responded: "Yes!" Then the perfume of roses grew still more strong, seeming to fan his cheek like a woman's warm breath. And a miracle came to pass; for Mr. Law, who realized poignantly that all this was sheer, downright nonsense, distinctly felt lips like velvet caress his forehead.

He closed his eyes, tightened his grasp on that hand of phantasy, and muttered rather inarticulately:

The voice asked: "What is it, dear?"

He responded: "Delirium . . . But I like it . . . Let me rave!"

Then again he slept.

TOBACCO satisfied—a clean, small chew of "Right-Cut." It's the Real Tobacco Chew.

Pure, mellow, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

That's why men are glad to hear about "Right-Cut," and to tell the glad news to their friends in turn.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and essence. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

No War Prices on Selz Fall Shoes

There is no doubt that shoes manufactured since the European war began will be higher in price both to the retailer and to the consumer, but Selz fall shoes were bought and on the retailers' shelves in August at normal prices.

You get a good illustration, at a time like this, of the advantage to you in buying goods that you know something about. The name of the maker is a safeguard to you, both as to quality and prices.

We have been making shoes for nearly fifty years; and Selz shoes are known to the public. The retail prices are widely known—$3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $4.50, $5.00, $6.00; the prices and the qualities have been extensively advertised.

If there ever was a time when the maker's name and guarantee on goods should be relied on, this is the time.

Every shoe we make has Selz stamped on the sole; you know exactly what you're getting when you see it.

There are 30,000 retailers now selling our shoes in this country, we believe every one of them agrees with our policy,—the maker's name a guarantee of quality and a fair price.

CHAPTER V.

The Hunted Man.

That day was hot and windless with an unclouded sky—a day of brass and burning.

Long before any sound audible to human ears disturbed the noonday hush, a bobcat sunning on a log in a glade to which no trail led, pricked ears, rose, glanced over shoulder with a snarl and—of a sudden was no more there.

Perhaps two minutes later a successthrobbed in high relief upon his temples; his lips were cracked and swollen, his eyes haggard, his hands torn and bleeding. His shirt and trousers and "crusiers" were wrecks, the latter scorched, charred, and broken in a dozen places. Woods equipment he had none beyond a hunting knife belted at the small of his back. All else had been either consumed in the forest fire or stolen by his Indian guide—who had subsequently died while attempting to murder his employer.

Since that event, the man had succeeded in losing himself completely. In seeking shelter from the thunderstorm, he had lost touch with his only known and none too clearly located landmarks. Then, after a night passed without a fire in the lee of a ragged bluff, he had waked to discover the sun rising in the west and the rest of the universe sympathetically upside-down; and aimlessly ever since he had stumbled and blundered in the maze of those grimly reticent fastnesses, for the last few hours haunted by a fear of falling reason—possessed by a notion that he was dogged by furtive enemies—and within the last hour the puppet of blind, witless panic.

But even as he strove to calm himself and rest, the feeling that something was peering at him from behind a mask of undergrowth grew intolerably acute.

At length he jumped up, glared wildly at the spot where that something no longer was, flung himself frantically through the brush in pursuit of it, and—found nothing.

With a great effort he pulled himself together, clamped his teeth upon the promise not again to give way to hallucinations, and turned back to the clearing.

There, upon the log on which he had rested, he found—but refused to believe he saw—a playing card, a tray of hearts, face up in the sun-glare.

With a gesture of horror, Alan Law fled the place.

While the sounds of his flight were still loud, a grinning half-breed guide stole like a shadow to the log, laughed derisively after the fugitive, picked up and pocketed the card, and set out in tireless, cat-footed pursuit.

An hour later, topping a ridge of rising ground, Alan caught from the hollow on its farther side the music of clashing waters. Tortured by thirst, he began at once to descend in reckless haste.

What was at first a gentle slope covered with waist-deep brush and carpeted with leaf-mold, grew swiftly more declivitous, a mossy hillside, as steep as a roof, bare of underbrush, and sparsely sown with small cedars through whose ranks cool blue water twinkled far below.

The shelving moss-beds afforded treacherous footing; Alan was glad now and then of the support of a cedar, but these grew ever smaller, and more widely spaced and were not always convenient to his hand. He came abruptly and at headlong pace within sight of the eaves of a cliff—and precisely then the hillside seemed to slip from under him.

His heels flourished in the air, his

back thumped a bed of pebbles thinly overgrown with moss. The stones gave, the moss-skin broke, he began to slide—grasped at random a youngish cedar which stayed him imperceptibly, coming away with all its puny roots—caught at another, no more substantial—and amid a shower of loose stones shot out over the edge and down a drop of more than thirty feet.

He was instantaneously aware of the sun, a molten ball wheeling madly in the cup of the turquoise sky. Then dark waters closed over him.

He came up struggling and gasping, and struck out for something dark that rode the waters near at hand—something vaguely resembling a canoe.

But his strength was largely spent, his breath had been driven out of him by the force of the fall, and he had swallowed much water—while the field of his consciousness was stricken with confusion.

Within a stroke of an outstretched paddle, he flung up a hand and went down again.

Instantly one occupant of the canoe, a young and very beautiful woman in a man's hunting clothes, spoke a sharp word of command and, as her guide steadied the vessel with his paddle, rose in her place so surely that she scarcely disturbed the nice balance of the little craft, and curved her lithe body over the bow, headed foremost into the pool.

Mr. Law had, in point of fact, endured more than he knew; more than even a weathered woodsman could have borne without suffering. Forty-eight hours of such heavy woods-walking as he had put in to escape the forest fire, would have served to prostrate almost any man; add to this (ignoring a dozen other mental, nervous and physical strains) merely the fact that he had been half-drowned.

He experienced a little fever, a little delirium, then blank slumbers of exhaustion.

He awoke in dark of night, wholly unaware that thirty-six hours had passed since his fall. This last, however, and events that had gone before, he recalled with tolerable clearness—allowing for the sluggishness of a drowsy mind. Other memories, more vague, of gentle ministering hands, of a face by turns an angel's, a flower's, a fiend's, and a dear woman's, troubled him even less materially. He was already sane enough to allow he had probably been a bit out of his head, and since it seemed he had been saved and cared for, he found no reason to quarrel with present circumstances.

Still, he would have been grateful for some explanation of certain phenomena which still haunted him—such as a faint, elusive scent of roses with a vague but importunate sense of a woman's presence in that darkened room—things manifestly absurd.

With some difficulty, from a dry throat, he spoke, or rather whispered: "Water!"

In response he heard someone move over a creaking floor. A sulphur match spluttered infamously. A candle caught fire, silhouetting—illusion, of course!—the figure of a woman in hunting shirt and skirt. Water splashed noisily. Alan became aware of someone who stood at his side, one hand offering a glass to his lips, the other gently raising his head that he might drink with ease.

Draining the glass, he breathed his thanks and sank back, retaining his grasp on the wrist of that unreal hand. It suffered him without resistance. The hallucination even went so far as to say, in a woman's soft accents:

"You are better, Alan?"

He sighed incredulously: "Rose!"

The voice responded: "Yes!" Then the perfume of roses grew still more strong, seeming to fan his cheek like a woman's warm breath. And a miracle came to pass; for Mr. Law, who realized poignantly that all this was sheer, downright nonsense, distinctly felt lips like velvet caress his forehead.

He closed his eyes, tightened his grasp on that hand of phantasy, and muttered rather inarticulately:

The voice asked: "What is it, dear?"

He responded: "Delirium . . . But I like it . . . Let me rave!"

Then again he slept.
